

March 1, 2013

Tim Cook, CEO
Apple
One Infinite Loop
Cupertino, CA 95014

“...with liberty and justice for all.”

Dear Mr. Cook,

Enough time has elapsed regarding the enclosed letter to inquire as to whether urging you to do so again will invite a reconsideration. That is assuming you received this letter in the first place.

Chevron corporation has responded with their considered viewpoint.

In these times, the issue of corporate patriotism is on the minds of many Americans as they watch either their jobs or those of their friends be sent overseas. They also wonder why many U.S. companies are demanding more visas for skilled people from other countries. Perhaps CEOs are looking for workers willing to accept lower wages than available skilled Americans would demand. (See attached article from the New York Times).

In addition, the outsourcing of medical tests, x-rays, dental crowns, ingredients in pharmaceuticals etc. is beginning to receive more attention as patients learn more from their physicians and dentists worried about deteriorating quality and safety.

Please respond to the bracketed question, at any of the contact points listed below on last year's letter (enclosed).

If you have any question or wish to know to whom copies of this letter are being sent, please write or call.

Sincerely yours,

Ralph Nader

Enclosed: New York Times Article (February 7, 2013)
Letter (June 20, 2012)

cc: Various interested parties in the public and private sectors.